PREFACE

As a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, the world is undergoing a transformation of the order of life. This is in line with the community's adaptation to the pandemic conditions that make mobility less shaken. The Covid-19 pandemic is an unprecedented shock that significantly changes the pattern of interaction between humans, so that it has implications for changes in patterns of economic, social and public service activities. The application of social distancing and health protocols requires the intensive use of digital technology to support human activities. Such conditions will continue in the new normal era, although herd immunity is expected to be achieved in 2022. The transformation from normal life to new normal life requires people to adapt to new habits. Thus, the implications of the COVID-19 pandemic on social and political science provide opportunities and challenges to engage in building community resilience globally. Therefore, post-pandemic forms a change in a new system or concept of society known as the New Normal.

This conference provide an information about the impact of post pandemic from invited speakers that has different backgrounds and from different countries so we can understand about the topics more. Also, this proceeding contains scientific analysis related to Post Pandemic from different scholars that has many approaches. Therefore, hopefully this proceeding will contribute to providing an insight that can benefit participant in particular that also can contribute to other human being in general. We are proudly presents the proceeding of Hasanuddin Global Conference (HGSC 2022) with academic collaborations in the theme of "Societal and Political Challenges in Post-Pandemic Global Transformation".
